1. Read the passage below and answer all the questions that follow. (20 marks)

Society has the obligation to provide young people with the right knowledge and skills to become productive workers, good parents and responsible citizens, according to a World Bank Report entitled Development and the Next Generation. And it is through education that the young develop their ability to be productive workers, good parents and responsible citizens.

The report says that effective investments need to happen during childhood and adolescence for it to bear fruits. Investments in adolescence are needed to make earlier investments during childhood pay off a hundredfold. The report underscores the need to establish a strong secondary education that will further strengthen the capabilities that primary education established.

It stresses the need to improve the relevance and quality of post-primary education by teaching students the practical knowledge, thinking and behavioral skills demanded by the labour market. To achieve this, the education system must promote a teaching method that leads to high learning achievement and blends the academic and vocational curricular. It should link what happens in school to local economy.

To improve the relevance of education to the learners, the report says, education must produce people with strong thinking and interpersonal skills because job tasks are increasingly requiring problem solving and communication skills. Entrepreneurs are also increasingly demanding thinking skills and problem-solving and behavioral skills such as self-confidence and leadership.

In a nutshell, what are the types of skills that a topnotch education system requires? It requires two basic types of skills: thinking skills and behavioral skills. Thinking skills include conceptual, critical and creative skills. High quality education develops learners with superior conceptual, analytical and critical skills – skills that condition the learner to be curious, inquisitive and always posing and seeking answers to problem situations or processes. Behavioral skills include such traits as perseverance, self-discipline, teamwork and the ability to negotiate risks.

The report also highlights the enduring role of what it terms basic skills: literacy and numeracy – ability to read, write and count. These basic skills are needed for further learning, work and life. The report also identifies what it terms post basic skills – the higher order thinking skills, and higher order behavioural skills such as decision-making skills, team work, the ability to negotiate conflict and manage risks and specific knowledge applied to real-life situations, and vocational skills. The foregoing demonstrates the integral role Early Childhood, Primary and Secondary cycle plays in creating the foundation for higher education in tertiary and university education. The quality of higher education is as good as the primary and secondary education.

MHS PRE-MOCK 2022

2. Read the excerpt below and answer the questions that follow: (25 marks)

“O God of all creation!” Resian cried out bitterly and audibly as soon as the cruel ugly old woman left her. “What unending woes these are! Taba! Kilome sogo! What have I done to the gods to deserve this kind of punishment?”

Then she recalled the teaching of the Bible, and especially where it narrated the woes of those who went through similar or even worse tribulations, but triumphed at the end. She particularly remembered the wailing lamentations of Job and his railing against injustice, and she thought her problems were nothing compared to those he had suffered. He triumphed because he was stoic, focused and was able to persevere. Olarinkoi and his demonic mother may physically take her to Tanzania, Olarinkoi may physically take her as his wife, they may even physically circumcise her, but mentally she was going to resist. She was going to refuse to be subdued. Where she could, she was going to physically resist. She resolved to remain focused and she prayed for strength and endurance to bear all those misfortunes.

She had wondered where Olarinkoi was, but she had now learnt from his mother that he was some place, planning more evil. She had also learnt that Oloisudori, the monster was looking for her. She now wondered who among them was a lesser devil. She did not know what to think about her father. He was like the proverbial pig that was fried using its own lard. She thought he was suffering double tragedy: the loss of his daughter and the loss of his shop and home if they were financed by Oloisudori.

(20 marks)

Pledging My Soul

When I was a boy
I climbed onto your granite breasts
smooth and round
I trailed my body
from the small of your back to your yielding neck
the cup of your breasts
was my pillow
the rivers of your tears
drowned me down in your depths
and the smooth plain of your flat belly yielded to mine
I was yours
and your were mine

Now a man
in exile from the warmth of your arms
and the milk of your teeth
the breath of your secret whispers in my ears Shall I not stride back to you with haste rout all my enemies and bind the wicked husbandmen
to rise naked before you-a bowl of incense?
and the smoke of my nakedness shall be an offering to you
pledging my soul

Charles Marechera (Zimbabwe)
